Grid Structure 190/190 (190/95)
measured from axis main-beam (shack)
parallel and perpendicular to front facade.
All posts and beams 8/12.
Height shack 268.
Height fence 75.

Grid Fluorescent Tubes 222/180
 measured from inner walls (front and right), parallel and perpendicular to front facade.
 Lights should be fixed directly on the ceiling, cables (white) laid out in perpendicular angles, completing the existent chaos at its best.

The field of fluorescent tubes overlaps with the shack, additional lights will be put on the wooden crossbars (lightning the ceiling) to gain additional luminance in the back-area.

Shack and Fence Minimal Version:

Exhibition-space is divided by a fence, into one larger undefined area and a corridor leading the way from the right entrance.

The fence is conceived to gather around, sit and lean on it, open for any other kind of appropriation. It doesn't prevent to use the right wall as exhibition display.

Office-space is sheltered by the shack, furnished with the existing tables and shelves, cupboards following individual (or corporate) taste.

A light wall of wooden planks separates the office from the kitchen area, existing sink and cupboards are replaced by a nicer sink and no cupboards, the fridge is positioned next to the wall.

The space can be furnished with a small table and some cupboard (as found) or some shelves fixed to the wall.

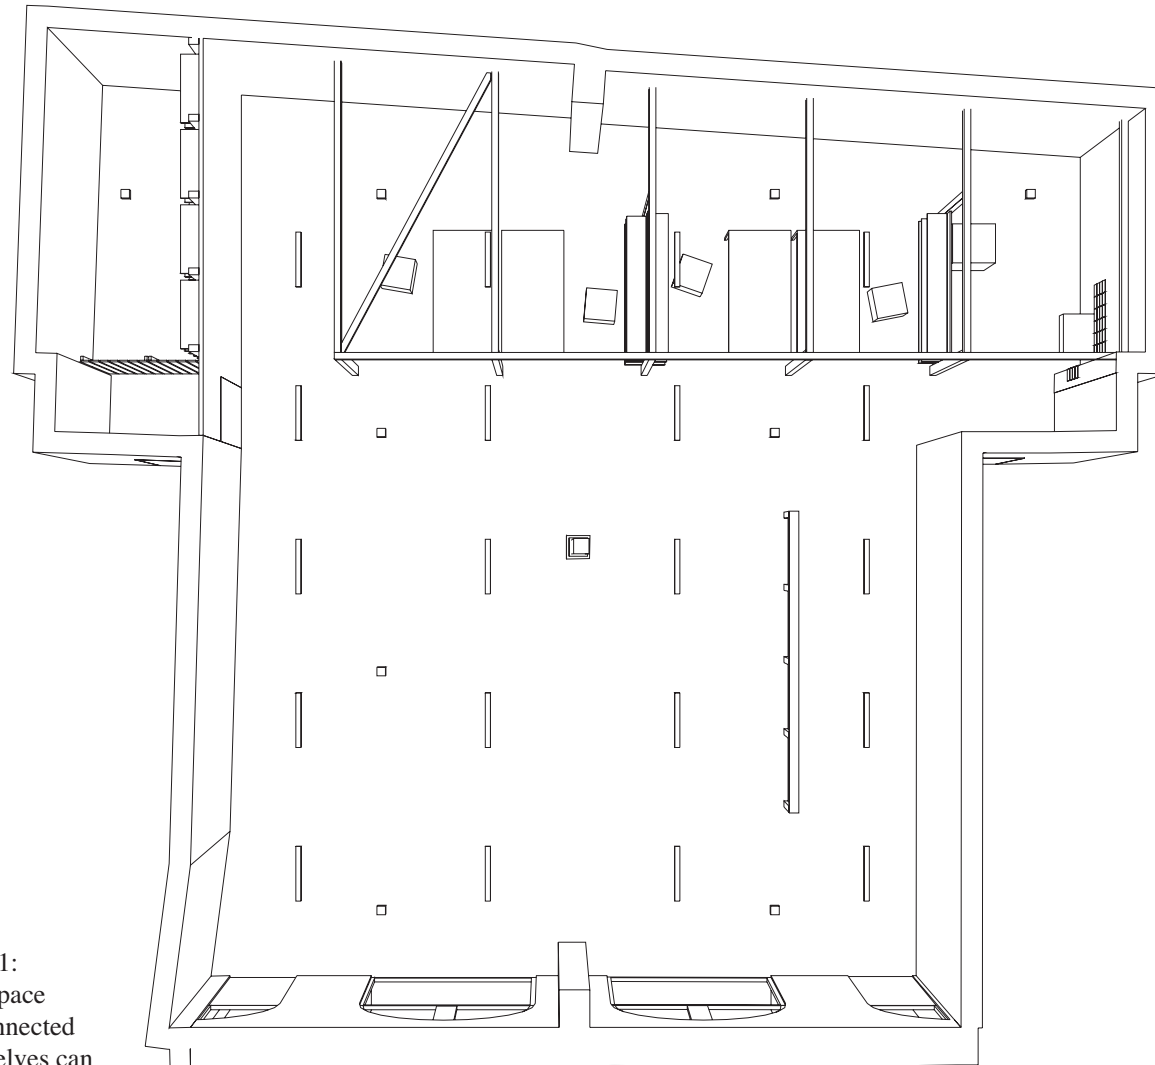

Existing tiles remain as leftover.

Shack and Fence Extended Version 1:
A second wall separates the office-space in two booths, shelf-boards are connected to its wooden planks. Planks and shelves can be prefabricated to fit the main structure in shape and design. A similar construction can be realised as an informal adaption of the shack (looks different).

Shack and Fence Flipped Version: Neighborhood-intellectuals settled down,
took over and told the staff to go.
Former office space is used for talks, small exhibitions and as a video-screening room featuring Godard-Movies galore.
